

Early Transition Planning

Plan Early. Plan Often.

Did you know that educators and families have found value in starting transition planning conversations during elementary school?

Research shows when we place higher expectations on youth, they tend to achieve them, which can lead to better post-school outcomes.

Early Transition Planning is a way to set these high expectations and allow youth to take the necessary steps in achieving their visions for the future!

Check out the resources on the Early Transition Planning website to start talking and connect for support!